

Primal Leadership – The Hidden Driver of Great Performance

The theory of emotional intelligence at work showed that emotionally intelligent men and women finish first. New research shows that of all the elements affecting bottom-line performance, it's the leader's mood and behaviors that drive the moods and behaviors of everyone else. The authors' observation about the overwhelming impact of a leader's "emotional style" represents a deeper analysis of an earlier assertion that a leader's emotional intelligence creates a certain culture or work environment. High levels of emotional intelligence, research showed, create climates in which information sharing, trust, healthy risk-taking, and learning flourish. Low levels of emotional intelligence create climates rife with fear and anxiety. The emotional impact of a leader is almost never discussed in the workplace, let alone in the literature on leadership and performance.

The authors discovered that emotional intelligence is carried through wires. To be more specific, the leader's mood is quite literally contagious, spreading quickly and inexorably throughout the business. If a leader's mood and accompanying behaviors are indeed such potent drivers of business success, then a leader's premier task is emotional leadership. This primal leadership demands more than putting on a game face every day. It requires an executive to determine, through reflective analysis, how his emotional leadership drives the moods and actions of the organization, and then, with equal discipline, to adjust his behavior accordingly.

Why does the leader's mood affect the emotions of the people around them? The reason lies in what scientists call the open-loop nature of the brain's limbic system, our emotional center. A closed-loop system is self-regulating, whereas an open-loop system depends on external
