

Overview

In Chap. 6 we explained decision rules for investment decisions. We discussed financial investment evaluation methods such as NPV (net present value), IRR (internal rate of return), and payback period. The chapter subsequently showed that S (social) and E (environmental) factors can be valued in their own right and can be included in constrained, expanded, or integrated PVs (present values). However, in Chap. 6 the cash flows were presented as given. In this chapter, we dive deeper into the capital budgeting process, which is the process of making a list of investment projects to be done. We make these investment decisions more tangible by presenting more detailed calculation examples—including the calculation and forecasting of cash flows and their drivers.

We start by showing the steps in the capital budgeting process and then show how cash flows and incremental cash flows are calculated and forecasted. Subsequently, we identify behavioural challenges in the capital budgeting process, such as the tendency to continue poor projects for too long, to underestimate risk, and to overestimate cash flows. Even more challenging, people tend to extrapolate business as usual into the future, which is highly unrealistic in dealing with non-linear processes such as climate change.

Next, we integrate S and E in the capital budgeting process—integrated capital budgeting. The constrained, expanded, and integrated PVs (introduced in Chap. 6) are now shown with cash flow projections. It is shown that FV, SV, and EV can have shared, reinforcing, or conflicting underlying value drivers—and that the way and extent to which they are taken into account affect decisions.

The value dimensions FV, SV, and EV can affect each other. We discuss the process of internalisation, by which SV or EV might spill over into FV. Those investment decisions are put in the context of corporate objectives, as put forward in Chap. 3 on corporate governance. See Fig. 7.1 for an overview of the chapter.

Transportation Act signed into law in April 2000 more than 10 billion would have been invested in highway construction public transportation airports and ports during the following 6 years However recent budgetary constraints will result in a delay in investing more than 2 billion in road projects for more than a decade In the current study a previously developed comparison tool was extended to bring quantitative evidence of safety and categorical evidence of broad motivations to planners engineers and the public in comparing the benefits of proposed transportation projects The extended tool developed in the current study provides visual devices for presenting multifaceted information about project attributes Policymakers and planners may find the presentation useful in assessing what types of projects are being undertaken and what projects to prefer to others The extended tool represents project information including cost average daily traffic and crash rates for comparison and prioritization of the 1 500 candidate projects that constitute the development plan of Virginia highways The extended tool is flexible to accommodate applications such as project selection planning and programming Several sources of information include the crash databases of the Virginia Department of Transportation VDOT and project plans for districts and localities The extended tool enables planners to identify principal motivations for various projects based on categories defined by the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century The tool introduces summary reports of criteria including project aggregate costs and counts of projects with particular motivations facilitating system level analyses and project ranking The summary reports can be useful to interpret outcomes of human deliberation or multicriteria rating and ranking processes some of which are demonstrated in this study in the body of the report and in a substantial appendix The major innovation of the extended comparison tool is its ability to synthesize the relevant quantitative and categorical information on a large and diverse portfolio of highway investments bringing more evidence to the table earlier in the planning process Three case studies demonstrate the application of the extended comparison tool in short medium and long term transportation plans These case studies are the VDOT Culpeper District Transportation Development Plan a 6 year plan long range financially constrained plans of selected small Virginia localities and the long range plan of the Thomas Jefferson Planning District Commission The incremental data to assess over 100 projects in a VDOT District Six Year Plan were collected in 90 minutes providing an advantage over typical methods that can require several hours or more per project Recommendations are given for implementation of the extended comparison tool and further development of the software prototype
