

Question Bank #3

(#6) In BIOL350, we considered an evolutionary hypothesis for why so many women in wealthy countries choose to be childless, despite that childlessness means zero fitness from direct lineage. Briefly describe this hypothesis. (21Nov10)

- evolutionary roots
 - preference for zero or low lifetime fertility in females has never had historical opportunity to be significantly selected against
 - preference for zero or low lifetime fertility in females is an indirect by-product of natural selection but has imposed no significant penalty on fitness
 - because of male control over female fertility throughout most of human evolution
- historically the investment in fertility and parental care was mostly female effort
- historically the effort into memetic descendants and meme transmission was mostly male
 - males (unlike females), throughout most of human evolution, could never be completely certain about their own paternity, and hence their own success in gene transmission
 - side tracking into activities promoting meme transmission thus compensated in helping to satisfy the evolved desire to "leave something of oneself" for the future
- socio-cultural/economical factors
- however, when women are independent, and in control of their own fertility
 - women are allowed, along with men to engage in activities promoting meme transmission - plus men are required to invest more equally with women in the effort associated with gene transmission
- transmission competition hypothesis: gene transmission and meme transmission compete for time and resources in both females and males
- now empowered with control over their own fertility, many women choose little or none, because they are also now empowered to engage in their intrinsic attraction to both leisure and legacy through accomplishment-based meme transmission
- which for women necessarily conflicts with the time and energy required for offspring production
- importantly, any inclination for compromising fertility in favour of opportunity for leisure or meme transmission never had earlier opportunity to be significantly disfavoured by selection in women, simply because their fertility was largely controlled by men
- women who preferred to be "childfree" could rarely exercise that choice throughout countless generations of patriarchal dominance over the course of human evolution
- many women had a so-called "maternal instinct", but many did not, and were nevertheless forced to bear offspring anyways - and importantly their descendants can now choose childfree
