importance and increasing academic study Strategic Management: Competitiveness and Globalisation Dallas Hanson, Michael A. Hitt, R. Duane Ireland, Robert E. Hoskisson, 2016-09-29 With an emphasis on global advantage the text offers a comprehensive examination of regional and international issues to provide a complete accurate and up to date explanation of the strategic management process New coverage on environmental concerns and emerging technologies as well as examples and cases from Australia New Zealand and Asia Pacific serve to engage students while updated international content demonstrates how strategic management is used in the global economy The text takes a resource based approach which requires the examining of a firm s unique bundling of its internal resources This text is appropriate for upper level undergrad usually third year post grad in Masters courses Strategic Value Management Marek Jablonski, 2019 The issue of value based management is present in many areas of business and management Value as an economic category determines strategic choices the investment attractiveness of business models competitive advantage and the effectiveness and efficiency of the organization Value is a key factor that determines the occurrence of business transactions It is subject to valuation in terms of company purchases and sales mergers or restructuring It determines the rationality of designing business models A value proposition is a factor that determines whether a company with a particular business model will succeed or not Value is also important in non profit organizations and building smart cities It is everywhere The exchange of value is the basis for an economic and social approach to the modern economy The dynamic perspective of value based management is particularly evident in the emergence of new concepts related to the Digital Economy New trends in value migration value capture and value retention are the features of a network economy where the exchange of value has not only an economic aspect but a social aspect above all Difficulties in valuing companies in the digital economy are unambiguous Intangible values are currently a decisive factor in shaping the approach to building new and innovative business models The reason for deciding to produce a book entitled Strategic Value Management and the Dynamic Perspective was due to the great interest in scientific research concerning this area Substantial needs in the field of discovering the determinants responsible for effective value based management also result from the needs of business practice Therefore the monograph issued to the readers is highly interdisciplinary It presents the findings of scientific research and the analyses of authors from many research centers The authors of individual chapters indicating modern trends and directions of the development of value based management prove how broad the concept is and how important it is in terms of contemporary management This book is intended for management theoreticians and business practitioners interested in effective value based management in a dynamically changing environment It can also be an inspiration for business consultants in terms of the implementation of the modern concepts of value based management in modern companies STRATEGIES FOR PROFITING FROM AN INNOVATION-- A DYNAMIC PERSPECTIVE ALLAN AFUAH, 1996 The Strategy Process in Dynamic Markets Katja Kanngiesser, 2007-12-08 Diploma Thesis from the year 2006 in the subject Business economics Business Management

Corporate Governance grade 1 7 European Business School language English abstract This paper is picking up a combination of three perspectives on strategy that are trying to perform a shift of paradigm towards a new way of strategic thinking serving as the basis for a strategy process in dynamic markets The combination of these three perspectives has been termed the complexity theory of strategy by Davis and Eisenhardt This theory combines Austrian economic thinking the dynamic capabilities view and complexity theory Austrian economics perceive markets as a rapid flow of heterogeneous and surprising opportunities that need to be captured by strategic managers The dynamic capabilities perspective perceives organizational resources as simple capabilities that enable quick flexible and creative improvisation to respond effectively to this rapid flow of opportunities Complexity theory perceives organizations and the economy as simple systems which produce complex and adaptive responses to environmental change The complexity theory of strategy in general focuses on simple rules in guiding improvisational actions in the effective execution of a series of often fleeting opportunities The three particular theories contribute to strategic management thinking to overcome the shortcomings of traditional strategic management thinking in dynamic markets The purpose of this paper is to create a strategy process from the perspective of the complexity theory of strategy which meets the requirements of dynamic markets How do the three underlying theoretical approaches from this theory contribute to form a strategy process for dynamic markets In order to answer this question elements from the three theories will be analyzed and assembled in a new framework for creating strategy which is more adequate in dynamic markets than classical process models The major result of this paper is that there cannot be a process model of sequenced steps for creating strategy because it would be too rigid to consider critical features for creating strategy in dynamic markets Rather the result is a loose framework for creating strategy in dynamic markets that is formed out of elements from the complexity theory of strategy The framework does not rely on a single strategic process sequence nor is it completely reactive Rather than ignoring change it helps creating a relentless pace of change and thus may be able to meet the requirements of dynamic markets
