

Section 1: Expanding Students' Knowledge

Note: You are encouraged to download the note-taking guide to document your responses. If you plan to print the note-taking guide and fill it out by hand, expand the tables after you download it to provide more space to enter a complete response.

This note-taking guide works best when you summarize the definition in your OWN words and connect it to examples you create. This helps you to connect the material you are learning to your existing schema. Your schema will act as an anchor to your new learning.

Define the following terms in your own words:

Term	Definition
Metacognition	when we think/reflect about our own thinking
Metacognitive Conversation	a public discussion of thinking; invite students into dialogue about their thinking
Text Structure	the way information in a text is organized; this organization helps students understand how information is given to find main ideas and details, problems/solutions, etc
Text Features	features such as heading and labels that help readers navigate the text
Basal Readers	leveled readers or anthologies that include a teacher manual, student workbook, and other enrichment resources

Define each comprehension strategy and summarize how it's used:

Comprehension Strategy	What is it?	How is it used?
KWL+	K(now) W(ant to know) L(earned) Categories of information: A = abilities (what they do), D = description (how they look), E = effect (what effect(s) they have), L = location (where they live), NA = not answered.	First, allow students to generate a list of things they know about a given topic and those things are categorized into the K column. Next, ask students what they are wondering about the topic, these things are categorized into the W column. Then, students read the selection or story. As they read, ask them to put a check mark next to any item in the K column confirmed by the author and to put a line through any item
