Introduction

Database management systems (DBMS) are software systems that allow users to create, store, retrieve, and manage data. They provide a structured way to organize information and ensure its integrity and security.

Key Concepts

- Data: Information that is organized and stored in a structured manner.
- Database: A collection of related data organized in a way that allows for easy access, retrieval, and modification.
- Table: A collection of related data organized in rows and columns.
- Primary Key: A unique identifier for each record in a table.
- Foreign Key: A field in one table that refers to the primary key of another table.
- Relationship: A connection between two or more tables based on common fields.

Database Design

The process of creating a database structure that meets the requirements of an application. It involves identifying the data needed, determining the relationships between the data, and designing the tables and their fields.

Normalization

A process of organizing data into tables to reduce redundancy and improve data integrity. It involves breaking down large tables into smaller, related tables and defining relationships between them.

Query Languages

Tools used to interact with a database. They allow users to retrieve, insert, update, and delete data. Examples include SQL (Structured Query Language) and DDL (Data Definition Language).

Security

Measures taken to protect data from unauthorized access, modification, or deletion. This includes user authentication, access control, and data encryption.
