Xin Li, Tianjiao Liu, Yalan Li, Xue Xiao, Ting Hu, 2026-01-13 The development of a child begins during pregnancy when prenatal environmental factors and genetic influences interact to shape fetal development and long term health outcomes Increasing evidence suggests that maternal nutrition exposure to toxins and maternal health conditions can have profound effects on fetal growth metabolism and immune system development These environmental influences interact with genetic predispositions and epigenetic modifications which in turn affect fetal development and contribute to a range of childhood disorders Understanding the intricate relationships between these factors is crucial for uncovering the developmental origins of health and disease While basic research has provided valuable insights into these interactions integrating clinical findings with genetic and epigenetic data remains essential for developing comprehensive strategies for prevention and treatment This research topic explores these complex interactions aiming to enhance our understanding of how prenatal factors influence both short term fetal health and long term child development The goal of this research topic is to provide a comprehensive review of the interactions between prenatal environmental factors and genetic influences on fetal development and child health outcomes By integrating findings from basic research and clinical studies the aim is to elucidate the mechanisms underlying these interactions and identify potential avenues for early intervention The topic will explore how maternal health nutrition and environmental exposures interact with genetic factors
