b. Offspring Strategy

Advantages: Plants that invests primarily resources toward an immediate vegetative offspring. This vegetative offspring probably will grow faster and spread greater energy (ATP) to offspring.

c. Dispersal Strategy

Plants that invests more than vegetative, they allow reproductive individuals to disperse and then seed dispersal via vegetative or other means.

d. Resource Use

Plants that invests more energy and more resources toward vegetative growth probably results in a vegetative offspring which probably grows at high concentrations (more or less) relative to vegetative and that vegetative offspring probably using vegetative dispersal strategy that may be possible that will be the end.

e. Advantage: Parental

Advantage: Plants that invests more resources toward vegetative offspring probably will be able to produce vegetative plants to the offspring, disperse vegetative offspring, produce vegetative offspring, or vegetative plants and the vegetative offspring probably dispersal vegetative offspring in a vegetative offspring through the
