Depreciation of Cars

You are ready to buy that first new car. You know that cars lose value over time due to depreciation and that different cars have different rates of depreciation. So you will research the depreciation rates for the cars you are thinking of buying. After all, the lower the depreciation rate is, the more the car will be worth each year.

◁ A Look Back Until now, our study of functions has concentrated on polynomial and rational functions. These functions belong to the class of algebraic functions, that is, functions that can be expressed in terms of sums, differences, products, quotients, powers, or roots of polynomials. Functions that are not algebraic are termed transcendental (they transcend, or go beyond, algebraic functions).

A Look Ahead ▷ In this chapter, we study two transcendental functions: the exponential function and the logarithmic function. These functions occur frequently in a wide variety of applications, such as biology, chemistry, economics, and psychology.

The chapter begins with a discussion of composite, one-to-one, and inverse functions, concepts needed to see the relationship between exponential and logarithmic functions.
