

Chapter 10: National, State and Local Finance and Spending

Revenue Types

- ▣ Like other federal governments, state and local governments use the revenue flows shown in part of a country's national income and products. In general, states spend the largest amount on goods for local governments, education and public welfare.

State Budgets

- ▣ A government budget is a governmental document presenting the government's proposed revenues and spending for a financial year that is often passed by the legislature, approved by the chief executive or otherwise authorized by the Finance Ministry or the cabinet.
- ▣ An operating budget is a combination of forecasts regarding proposed future state and financial activities over the coming year or years. Operating budgets are completed in advance of the accounting period, which is why they require statistical forecasts and estimates.
- ▣ Fiscal policy budgeting, an alternative approach to the planning process, used by democratic nations and organizations, bring from governments such as new initiatives, replacement and renewal, new plans, new products, and various developmental projects and modify the funding of each through the state's capitalization structure.
- ▣ Statewide Fiscal Budgeting is the broad budget encompassing a constitutional role requiring that a state's entire general revenue be devoted to it. It involves a budget process that provides a complete and comprehensive outline of government.

What Are State Finance Issues?

- ▣ 1. Administrative: state has no local, state public state activities. State governments also provide financial help to their local governments, which are elementary, middle, and high schools.
- ▣ 2. Public safety: state police, state law, court case systems.
- ▣ 3. Highways and Transportation: building and maintaining highway systems, a number report about response state's constant money to federal and
