

American Politics Chapter 1

Politics is the study of who gets what when, where, why, and how

Why? (The purpose of it all) = Power.

Authority:

- Power that is defined as legitimate
- Government can harness legitimacy (They use it to do things we wouldn't allow anyone to do)
- This is brief, but also done through force
 - When events shake that legitimacy, that's where you'll see change
 - Protests result in major social shifts

Democracy is incredibly fragile

- The Stories we tell ourselves
- We make sense of society in a series of stories
- Who is good/bad, what is legitimate/wrong
- Those stories reinforce some narratives over others, shape power, makes it seem obvious and unquestioning
 - Gatekeeping
- We don't have the same ability to set narratives
- Some have been more durable over time

Institutional Rules Matter

- When you choose the game, you do well in it
- Institutions in the US were not set up by all of us
 - It is harder for some people (groups) to interact/engage with those institutions
 - If an institution works well for you- it can be hard to see it not working

Power at the beginning-> power at the present

Politics and Economics

Economics also deals with distributional outcomes

-Material resources and services

Our focus is primarily on power
