

1.1: Displaying Distributions with Graphs

Individuals and Variables

- Individuals are objects described by a set of data. Individuals may be people, but they may also be animals or things.
- A variable is any characteristic of an individual. A variable can take different values for different individuals.

Categorical and Quantitative Variables

- A categorical variable places an individual into one of several groups or categories.
- A quantitative variable takes numerical values for which arithmetic operations such as adding and averaging make sense.

Distribution

The distribution of a variable tells us what values the variable takes and how often it takes these variables.

Overall Pattern of a Distribution

To describe the overall pattern of a distribution:

- Give the center and the spread
- See if the distribution has a simple shape that you can describe in a few words.

Outliers

An outlier in any graph of data is an individual observation that falls outside the overall pattern of the graph.

Symmetric and Skewed Distributions

- A distribution is symmetric if the right and left sides of the histogram are approximately mirror images of each other.
- A distribution is skewed to the right if the right side of the histogram (containing half of the observations with larger values) extend much farther out than the left side.
- A distribution is skewed to the left if the left side of the histogram extends much farther out than the right side.

Percentile

The p th percentile of a distribution is the value such that p percent of the observation fall at or below it.

Time Plot

- A time plot of a variable plots each observation against the time at which it was measured.
- Always mark the time scale on the horizontal axis and the variable of interest on the vertical axis. If there are not too many points, connecting the points by lines helps show the pattern of changes over time.
