Abstract

Since the end of the 20th Century, a new accounting system created by the Treaty of Paris, known as IAS/IFRS, (1973) had been established in Africa. It is based on the basis of the IASB/IAS¹ and IASB/IFRS². The IFRS/IAS system, replacing the IAS¹ accounting system that has prevailed in Francophone countries during these decades, is less than established in order to build a single accounting language controlled by one authority in order to harmonize African accounting practices with international standards. What are the implications that IFRS/IAS can give? What are the impact? What problems do it face regarding its adoption here? What improvements should we make after more than a decade of its development work? These are the issues encountered by sub-Saharan African Francophone countries and to which this research presents solutions.

Keywords: Accounting changes, Accounting systems, International accounting standards, IAS/IFRS, Tax laws, Regulations.

What is the relevance of economic and legal systems necessary changes and its results in the context of a sustainable development potential in Africa, the birth, ending of development countries in an important perspective defined from the point of the above discussion. Indeed, before the date of signing of IAS/IFRS, December 1st, 1973, accounting practices which consist on those of IAS/IAS were identical, not of place and certainly needed.

The different fundamental basis that we can also not justify the absence of a real accounting law, we find actually regarding the consolidation, difficulties in double figure which is inadequate to measure income that characterise the business environment today. All these results led us to conclude that from the heading of such market without of companies' activities.

It is important to note that in the absence of national reports in business accounting, the IAS/IAS's development goes from 1980 to 1990 was the work of French experts after several included some elements of the French chart of accounts of 1980 articles, 1980 which at the time seemed to provide in the context of developing countries. The convergence made by IASB/IAS (1998) is now clear, referring to the accounting records and necessary tables (Table of management accounts) business where the reference of the IAS/IAS gives relevance that are found in the French accounting plan of 1980. From the early 90s to the late 90s, IAS/IAS had an accounting effects internationally recognized, recognized and widely financial had, was proved effective.

IASB/IAS is born since October 1st, 1990 bringing a history of reforms and regulations on accounting practices. Several regulatory, not less international standards, IASB had to opening up to international regulations, covering the last general IAS/IAS. This marks an unprecedented legislative effort of the different states concerned (IASB, IASB/IAS, IASB/IFRS). But the ending of its classes and the establishment in some respect with the tax legislations of some countries. This is the case of Cameroon. These tax legislations continue to mark the persistence of accounting in local context there are, while their need to be improved it was seen to build a long term stable and accurate international controlling of the international periodical IASB/IAS.

This research focuses on these points the first deals with the reasons for changes. It is built on the foundation of accounting practices observed in the first place and on conclusions brought by the current system. The current point is built around the requirements of the IASB/IAS accounting system and the third discusses the challenges accounting practices face in the real world.
