Teacher's Notes

Communicative activities

The following teacher-led activities cover the same content of text as the exercises at the back of the Reader, and substitute their own content. For substitute activities substitute Students' Activities pages of the book. For the Communicative Activities, use with older students and with the support of discussion and guidance with less able, with the suggestion of discussion and guidance with less able, with the suggestion of discussion and guidance with less able.

ACTIVITIES BEFORE READING THE BOOK

- 1 Students look at the front cover of the book. Ask them to say what they see and what they see in the pictures. Which picture comes first in the history of Britain? Which one comes last? (It doesn't matter if students don't know – they will find out by reading the book.) As a follow-up exercise, cut out historical images from magazines and newspapers and stick them on cards. Then divide the class into groups and ask them to place the cards in chronological order. This exercise helps students to think about history in small terms – a useful preparation for reading the book.
- 2 Students work individually. Ask them to read the introduction on page 4. Highlight some of the most important people and developments in Britain's history. Then ask students to write a similar introduction to a history of their own country. Students may want to research their country's history before writing, but this is a good exercise for homework.

ACTIVITIES AFTER READING A SECTION

Chapter 1

Students work in pairs. Ask them to prepare and then act out the following conversation.

- Student A: You are Elizabeth. Your husband has just died and the Romans want to take his money. You want to build an army and fight the Romans. Talk to Student B about your army. Tell them why you want to fight, how you can help him if you win? Can you make him join your army?
- Student B: You are a British farmer in the east of England. You have a son. Elizabeth wants you to fight in her army. Do you want to join her? How do you feel about the Romans? Will you be dangerous? What will you get for fighting? Will you join her army?

Chapter 2

Students work in small groups. Ask them to think about the history of Ireland. Why are there still problems between Catholics and Protestants today? Read the students should work in their groups to make a list of other places in the world where religious groups have a long history of disagreement. After about ten minutes, ask the groups to read out their lists. Which group has the longest list?

Chapter 3

Students work individually. Ask them to write a page in Elizabeth's diary about one of these events:

- Elizabeth learns that her cousin, Mary, is planning against her. What does she decide to do – and why?
- Elizabeth catches a spy for William (Protestants). How does it make her feel? What does she say about it?
- Elizabeth learns that King Philip's Spanish ships are coming to England to fight. What does she decide to do? How does she feel about it?

Chapter 4

Students work in small groups to write their own Magna Carta for an imaginary state. Ask them to think of ten rules for good government. Walk around the class and help students with vocabulary. Then ask the groups to read out their rules and explain why they chose them. If you have time, choose two of the best rules from each group and get the students to write them on the board.

Chapter 5

Before the class, prepare enough role-play cards for the whole class. On each card write one of the following characters from late 18th/early 19th-century Britain:

wealthy landowner, poor farmer, factory owner, adult factory worker, child factory worker, a politician

Give each student a card (some students will have the same card). Distribute the cards. Students should come to the front of the class. They should stand in a circle and say their role to the class. They should then stand next to their partner. They should talk to their partner and try to find out what their partner's role is. They should then stand in a circle and say their role to the class. They should then stand next to their partner. They should talk to their partner and try to find out what their partner's role is. They should then stand in a circle and say their role to the class. They should then stand next to their partner. They should talk to their partner and try to find out what their partner's role is.

Chapter 6

Students work individually. Ask them to choose an event from Chapter 6 and write it as a newspaper article from the same time. Encourage students to make their articles as individual and imaginative as they can. They should include imaginary thoughts with the article, and direct quotes from them. Students may want to research their chosen event from other books or the Internet. Ask them to include pictures or photographs. Then you can publish the finished articles in a newspaper format for the whole class to enjoy.

ACTIVITIES AFTER READING THE BOOK

- 1 Ask students to look at the map on page 6. What can they remember about each of the places on the map? Then ask them to make a historical map of their own country. What place names will they include and why? In a reasonably small class, students could show their maps to the rest of the class while they explain the significance of each place marked on the map.
- 2 Before class, choose some important events from British history and write them on cards. Give each card to a different student. The student who has the card should then stand in a circle and say their role to the class. They should then stand next to their partner. They should talk to their partner and try to find out what their partner's role is. They should then stand in a circle and say their role to the class. They should then stand next to their partner. They should talk to their partner and try to find out what their partner's role is.

Word list

It will be useful for your students to know the new words found on the inside back cover of the Reader. They are presented in the 'Before you read' sections at the back of the book. (The definitions are based on those in the Longman Active Study Dictionary.)
