False	Matter Cycles <hr/> Read the passage carefully before answering the questions that follow.  Water is constantly cycling through ecosystems, moving between living organisms and nonliving components of the environment through evaporation and condensation. The water cycle, also known as the hydrologic cycle, is a continuous process that moves water around the planet. It is a process that is essential to life on Earth and is a key component of the environment. Evaporation is the process by which water changes from a liquid to a gas or vapor. This process occurs when the sun's energy is absorbed by water molecules, causing them to move faster and eventually break free from the surface of the liquid. This process is essential to the water cycle because it is the only way that water can move from the surface of the Earth into the atmosphere. Condensation is the process by which water vapor changes from a gas to a liquid. This process occurs when water vapor in the atmosphere cools and the water molecules slow down and eventually form droplets of liquid water. This process is essential to the water cycle because it is the only way that water can move from the atmosphere back to the surface of the Earth. Precipitation is the process by which water falls from the sky as rain, snow, sleet, or hail. This process occurs when water vapor in the atmosphere cools and the water molecules slow down and eventually form droplets of liquid water. This process is essential to the water cycle because it is the only way that water can move from the atmosphere back to the surface of the Earth. Runoff is the process by which water flows over the surface of the Earth. This process occurs when water from precipitation or melting snow and ice flows over the land and into bodies of water. This process is essential to the water cycle because it is the only way that water can move from the surface of the Earth back to the surface of the Earth. Infiltration is the process by which water soaks into the ground. This process occurs when water from precipitation or runoff soaks into the ground and becomes part of the groundwater. This process is essential to the water cycle because it is the only way that water can move from the surface of the Earth back to the surface of the Earth.  Answer the questions below for each question. 32. What process occurs when water changes from a liquid to a gas or vapor? a. Respiration b. Photosynthesis c. Transpiration d. Condensation 33.
