S. Natto, Mary Anne Sampaio Melo, Abdulrahman A. Balhaddad, 2025-08-20 The complexity of the oral environment challenges the clinical longevity of dental materials. These challenges involve several aspects related to the mechanical and biological performance of these materials. Dental materials inside the oral cavity are subjected to repetitive cycles of stress and fatigue. This mechanical challenge is complicated by the frequent exposure to consumable drinks and salivary enzymes which may accelerate the degradation process of such materials. In addition, the interaction between dental materials and oral biofilms is a complex and dynamic process that can have significant implications for oral health. Dental materials provide a surface for the attachment and growth of oral bacteria. The attached microbes can produce acids as metabolic byproducts leading to the degradation of dental materials. Such challenges have guided dental researchers to investigate advanced approaches to improve dental materials mechanical and biological behavior. Applying nanotechnology in the dental field allows engineering dental materials with improved mechanical and physical properties. Besides imparting bioactive compounds in dental materials contributes to the remineralization of tooth structure and the preservation of the surrounding soft tissues via releasing ions and diminishing the attachment of the oral microbes. The design of advanced dental materials with improved properties allows dental professionals to achieve superior treatment outcomes, enhance patient satisfaction and provide more efficient and effective dental care.

Non-Metallic Biomaterials for Tooth Repair and Replacement

P Vallittu, 2012-12-11 As the demand for healthy attractive teeth increases, the methods and materials employed in restorative dentistry have become progressively more advanced. Non-metallic biomaterials for tooth repair and replacement focus on the use of biomaterials for a range of applications in tooth repair and in particular dental restoration. Part one reviews the structure, modification and repair of dental tissues. The properties of enamel and dentin and their role in adhesive dental restoration are discussed along with biomineralization and biomimicry of tooth enamel and enamel matrix proteins. EMPs for periodontal regeneration. Part two goes on to discuss the processing, bonding and wear properties of dental ceramics, glasses and sol-gel derived bioactive glass ceramics for tooth repair and replacement. Dental composites for tooth repair and replacement are then the focus of part three, including composite adhesive and antibacterial restorative materials for dental applications. The effects of particulate filler systems on the properties and performance of dental polymer composites are considered along with composite based oral implants, fibre reinforced composites (FRCs) as dental materials and luting cements for dental applications. With its distinguished editor and international team of expert contributors, Non-metallic biomaterials for tooth repair and replacement provides a clear overview for all those involved in the development and application of these materials, including academic researchers, materials scientists and dental clinicians. It discusses the properties of enamel and dentin and their role in adhesive dental restoration. Chapters also examine the wear properties of dental ceramics, glasses and bioactive glass ceramics for tooth repair and replacement. Dental composites and antibacterial restorative materials are also considered.
